

FlairSheet

Phase 1:

FlairSheet - Sign Up

← → ✕ 🏠 🔍

FlairSheet

The place to show off.

Create an account

Have an account? Login

This is the login signup page and will be the first page that popus when the user enters the url. When registering what sure to ask if the user is registering as an individual, a small business, or a large business. The larger the entity, the more will be charged for per month.

<https://www.flairsheet.com/login>

FlairSheet

The place to show off.

Login With

Or

☐ Remember MeHave an account? Login

We will connect to facebook, instagram, and other social media websites in the future to get in touch with everyone a person knows. This feature is big and will be added in the future.

https://www.flairsheet.com/login

FlairSheet

The place to show off.

Login With

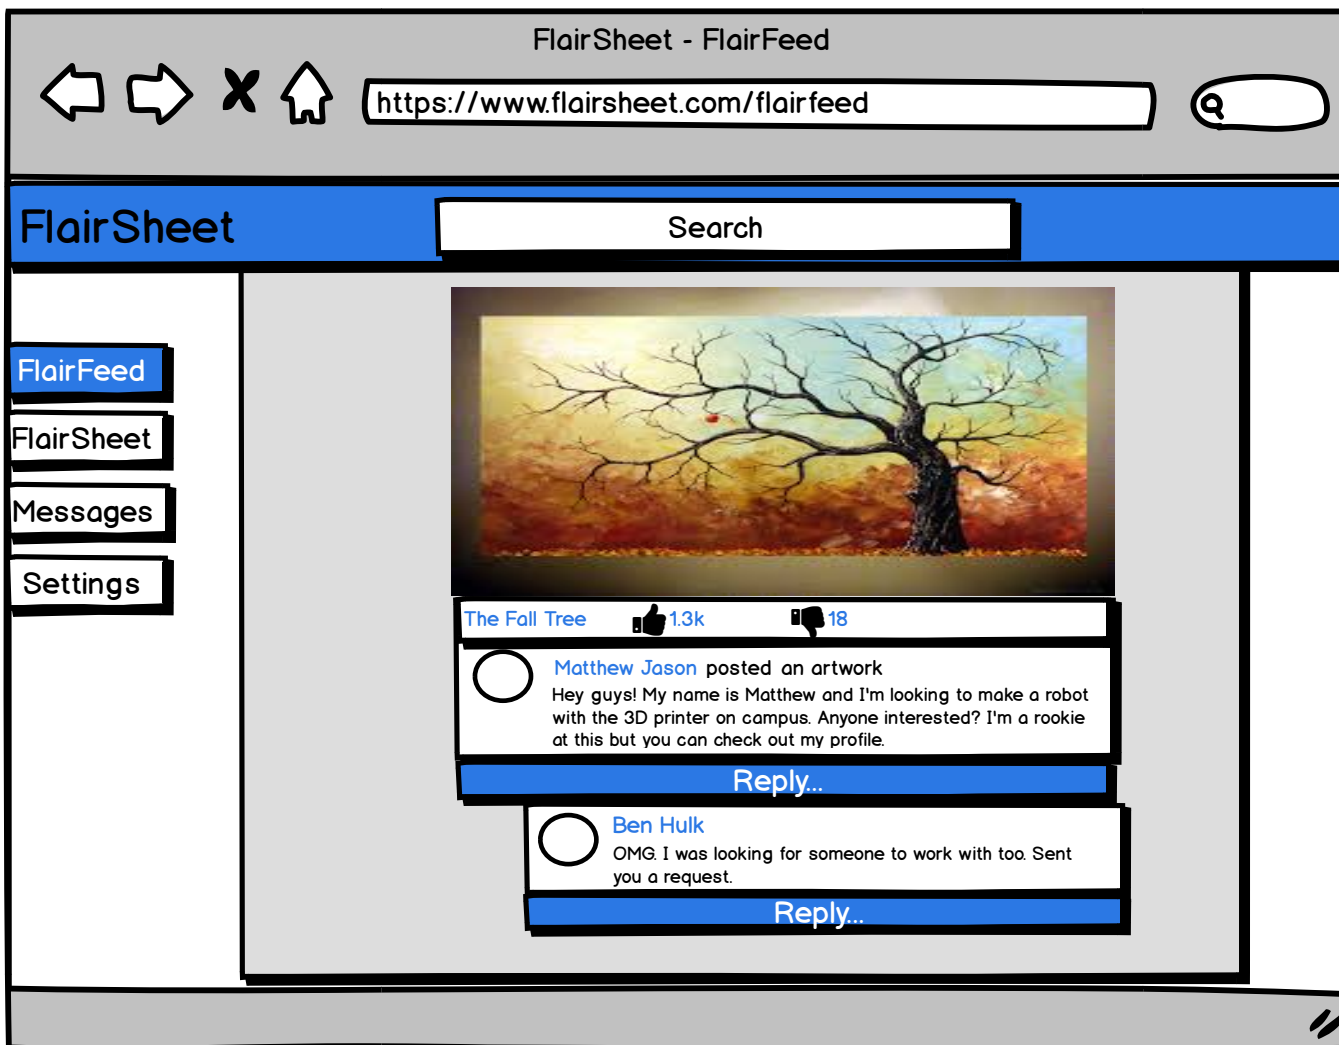

Email

Password

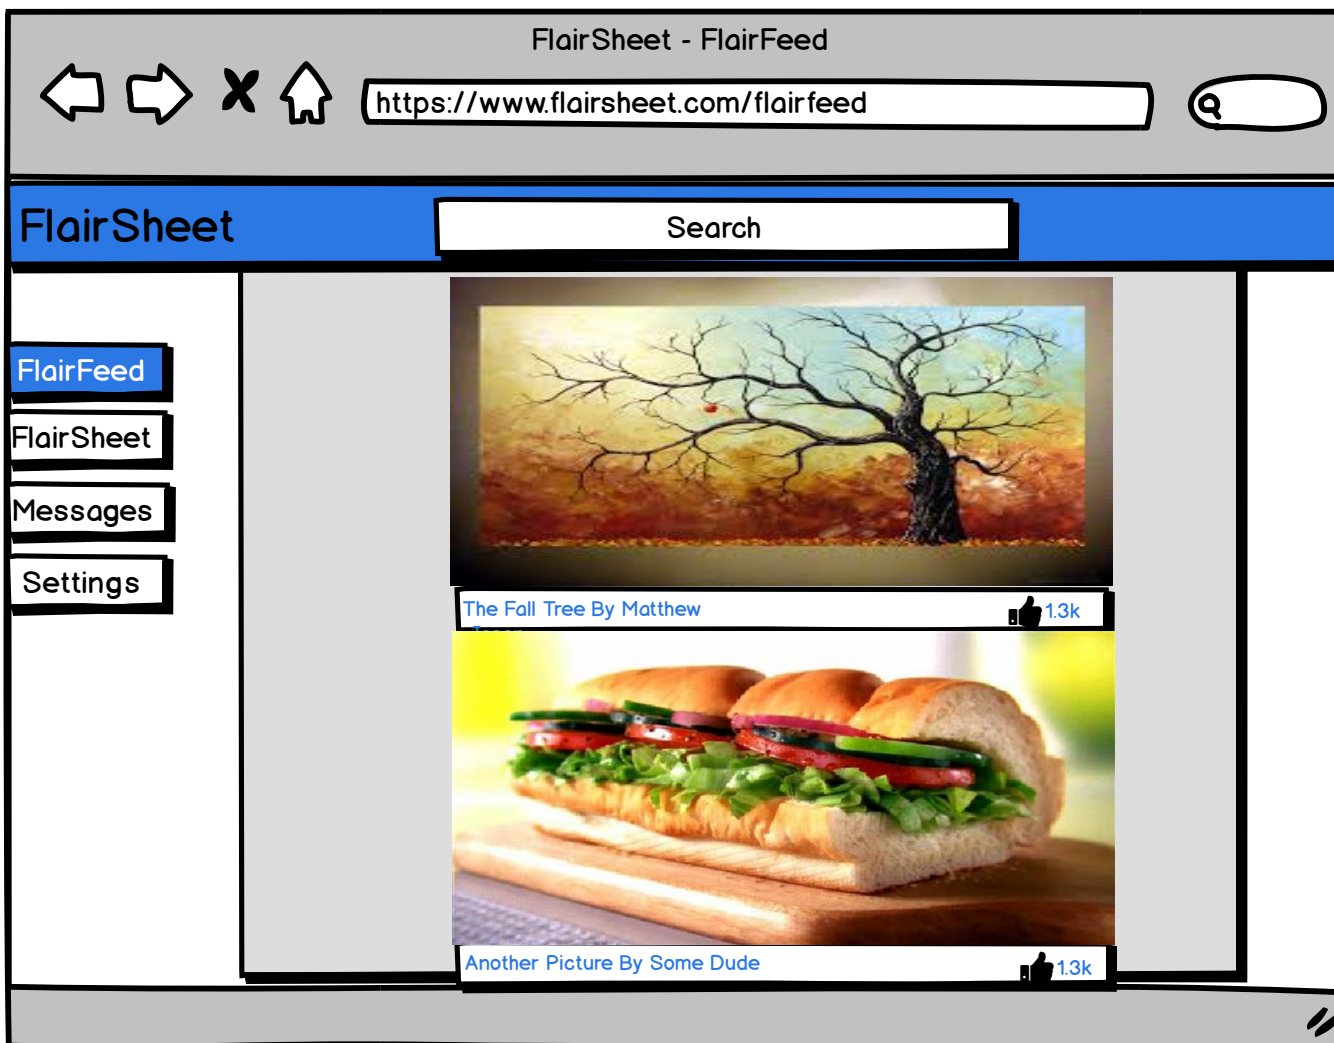

☐ Remember Me

Login

Have an account? Login

This is the FlairFeed. This is where individuals can post images, videos, or documents, or even code. Basically we will provide the users a platform to show off their skills and talents. The thing that they show us can be something they contributed to or something they created. We will add the feature to add people who contributed to the project in the future. The search bar will enable the users to sort the skill they want to look at. Users can also sort what's in the FlairFeed to show only the work that they support or everyone's work.

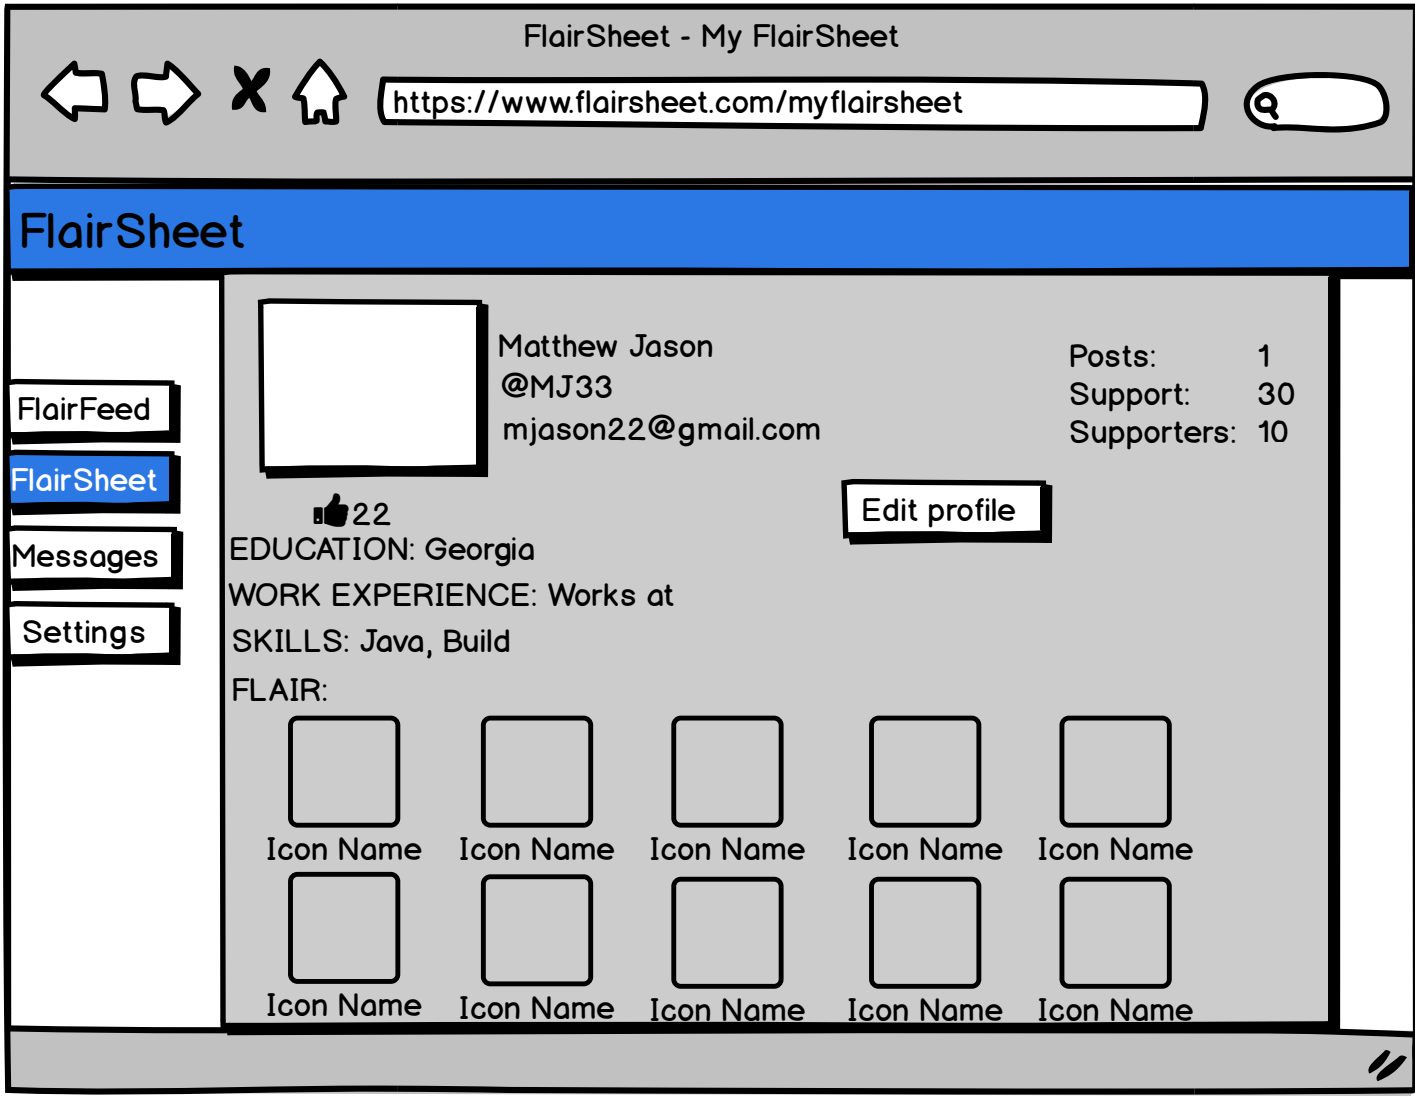

The previous screen shows the expanded version of each Flair. Normally, when you look at the FlairFeed you should see the image to the left. This is the minimized form. The bar under the image summarizes the image. As shown in the picture, the bar shows the image name and who drew it. We will add a like button on the right and a share button. If everything works correctly, when you scroll through the FlairFeed you should see whatever skills you want to look at. For example, if you select art, you will scroll through and see a bunch of artworks. The limit of the FlairFeed is all in the creativity of the users.

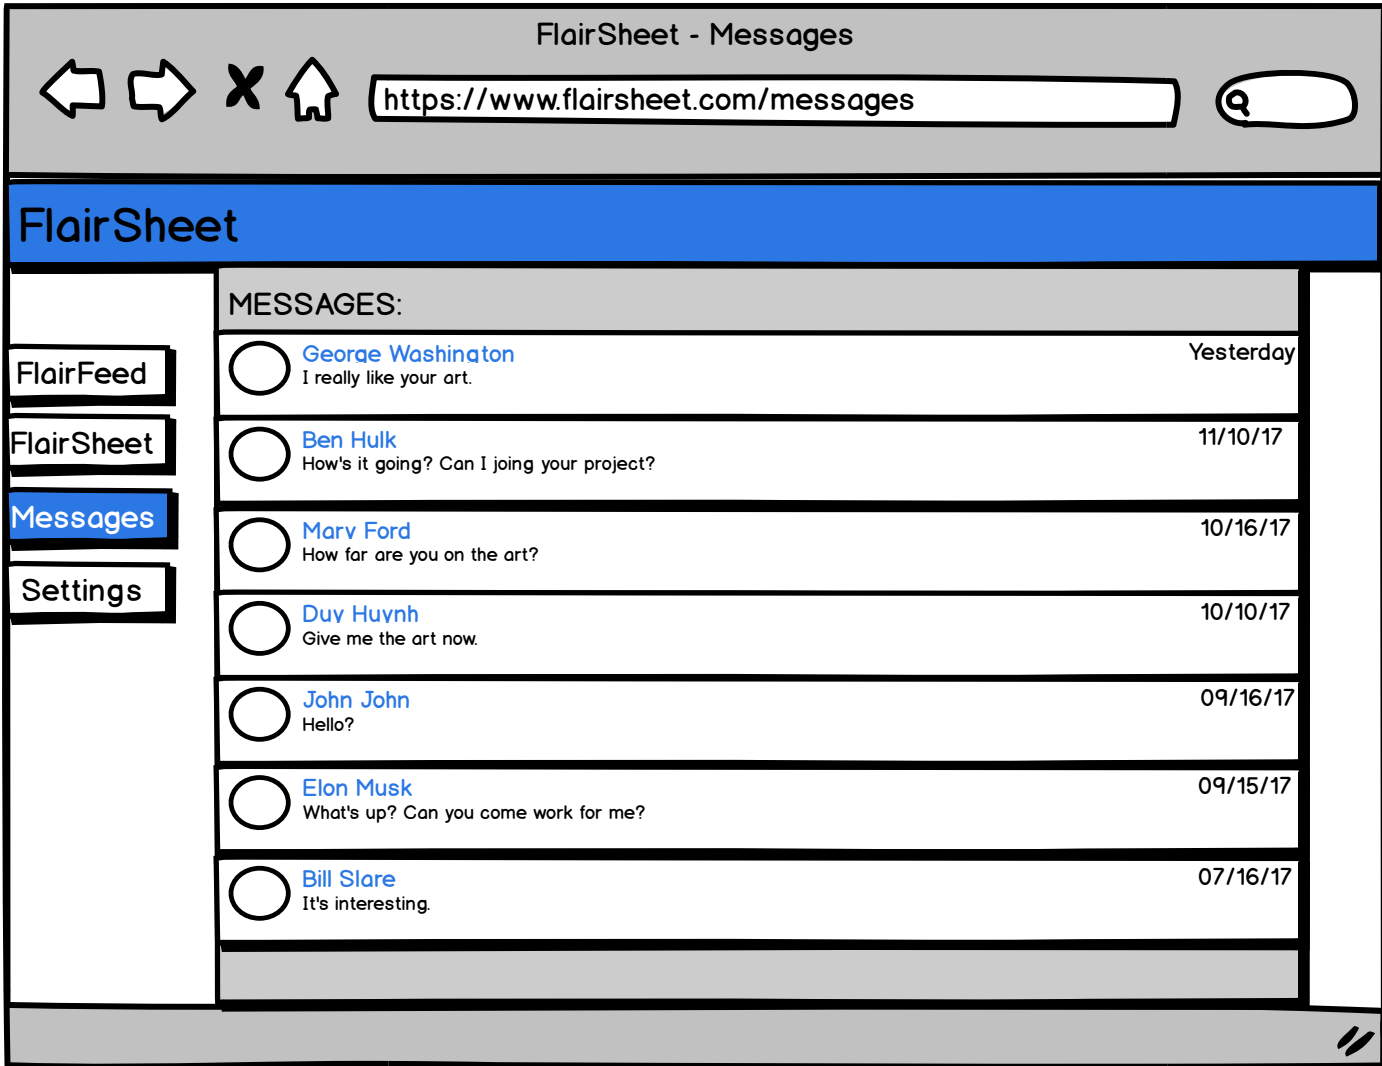

This is basically someone's profile. When you click on someone's name, that person's profile will pop up. A user's profile shows how many supporters they have and how many people they support. They can also post their skills and experiences. In the Flair section, all of the users' skill posts will be shown. This is a very temporary mock up. A lot can be added.

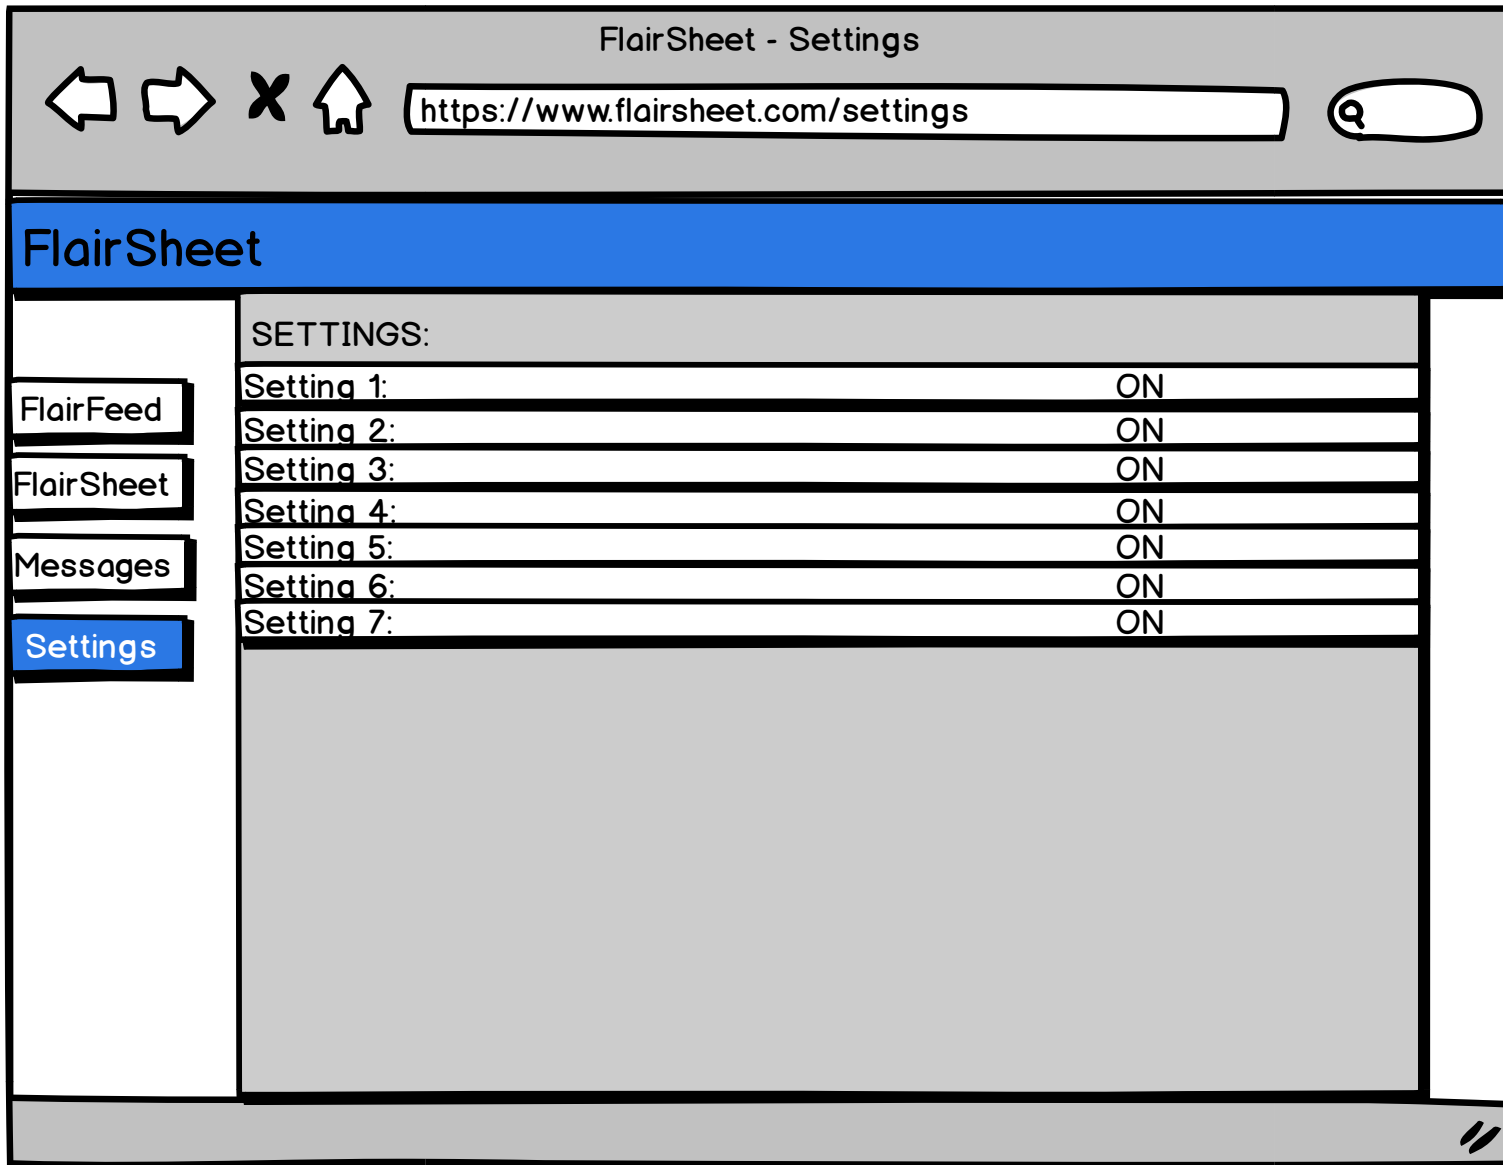

This is the detail page for a post. In this page, it summarizes all of the details about a post. In addition, you could also post images or anything related to the progress of your post. For example, if you have an artwork, you can post the progression of your artwork. In addition, we could have a button for whether to make the project public and keep it hidden until the person is done and wants to share it. This page also allows others to post suggestion or request to join and work together on it. A lot of things can be added and removed from this page.

This is the user's profile page or FlairSheet. This is where they show off their skills and talents. This summarizes the user's profile and also shows all of their Flairs. They can add, edit, and remove their flairs accordingly.

This is a private message chat where users can contact another user and talk about working on something together. Or just comenting about something. This feature is not necessary right away.

This is a list of all the settings. And allows the users to change it. This is very unnecessary and can be moved to where it is necessary.

All of the images above show the starting appearance and feature of the app. I think we should try to get all of the basic core features down before trying to expand and build more features. We don't even know if people will actually use our product. So we should build a minimum viable product and then see how people react to it. And if people are even willing to use it. If you don't like any of the mocks above or think we should change it a certain way, please come talk to me. I want to hear your thoughts.